Session Description: Judges on Human Rights Online

In an increasingly connected world, the safeguarding of human rights within the digital realm becomes imperative. The session, "Judges on Human Rights Online," aims to address this urgent issue by leveraging the unique perspectives of the judiciary, which has been traditionally underrepresented in discussions at the Internet Governance Forum (IGF).

This session will focus on the vital role that judges from diverse jurisdictions play in shaping the landscape of digital rights and freedoms. It will explore how legal frameworks can evolve to better protect human rights online, particularly in terms of privacy, freedom of expression, and the right to access information. The session will involve advocate, judges, magistrates, and cybersecurity law experts.

Key areas will include:

Legal Challenges and Opportunities:
Examining how judges can interpret existing laws and contribute to the formulation of new legal frameworks that protect individuals in the digital age.

Cross-Border Data Flow:
Discussing the implications of jurisdictional challenges and the enforcement of rights across different legal systems.

Inclusion and Accessibility: Addressing the necessity for laws to inclusively protect the rights of all individuals, including marginalized groups and persons with disabilities.

The session will feature a balanced panel of speakers from the Global South and Western hemispheres, ensuring a wide array of insights. The panel will maintain gender equality, with speakers representing different genders, ages, political orientations, and geographical backgrounds.

Given the hybrid nature of IGF 2024, the session will facilitate onsite and online participation. It will include at least one moderator and a speaker present in Riyadh to ensure seamless integration of discussions, alongside an online moderator and a rapporteur to enhance interaction and documentation of the proceedings.

By bridging judicial insights with the challenges and opportunities of digital governance, this session aims to contribute significantly to the global dialogue on internet governance and the protection of human rights online.
